Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 186 pages. Raw, Moving, Funny and Sad this intimate look at the life of a gangcrimes cop, and the world he moved through on Chicagos West Side, is unlike any other book youve ever read. This is the unique story of one of Chicagos most legendary cops. Police officers see more than their share of life and death, certainly morethan most of us see in our normal work-a-day world. But Mike Cronin had seen more even than most cops. After his best friendwas killed in Vietnam, he voluntarily enlisted in the Marines and askedto be sent to Vietnam. He had been out on 110 combat missions when onehot December morning he stepped on a land mine and, in one horrendous blast, lost his left foot, his eyesight and his dream of ever becoming a Chicago police officer. Cronin was given the last rites by a priest after gangrene set in onhis foot. When the priest asked if he had anything to confess, he answered, Father its not like Ive been to any wild parties lately. Cronin was an extraordinarily stubborn young man, with a remarkable workethic and a competitive zeal that made him fight back, and it was thatresolute nature, a few good breaks, one of them the fact that his visioneventually returned, that helped him become the first applicantwithout a foot to ever be accepted onto the Chicago Police Department. The son of working class Irish immigrant parents, Cronin was born andraised in St. Gertrudes parish on Chicagos north side. This was apart of urban America that no longer exists. Singular ethnic patchesthat made up the quilt of Chicago where everyone went to mass on Sunday andsat down to dinner before 4 p. m; where you still said grace at dinner andwaited for your...
